Goal

Fruit4London Social Media Strategy 2026

A top-of-funnel strategy designed to build brand awareness and establish Fruit4London as London's go-to fruit and veg box supplier for modern workplaces.

- Put Fruit4London in front of young and established professionals across marketing, sales, finance, and HR
- Make "office fruit delivery" feel culturally relevant, not corporate or wellness-heavy
- Build familiarity, trust and preference before we ask for the sale
- Turn attention into intent: profile visits, website clicks, enquiries and repeat ordering

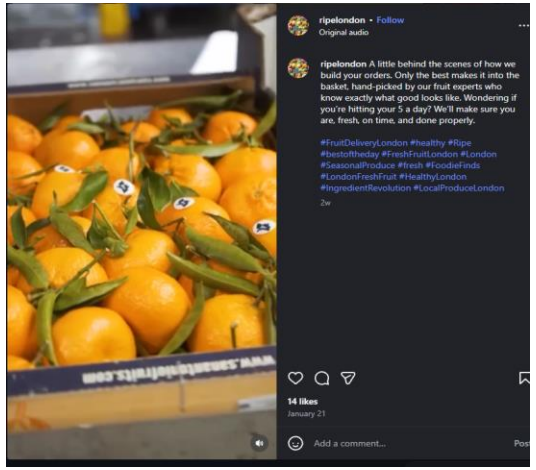
Competitor Analysis

Overview



Competitor's utilise a mix of static and video content to varying levels of success.

Brands that leverage social media to effect include:

- Oddbox
- Abel & Cole
- All Greens
- Riverford
- Ripe.London
- Kent Veg Box
- Streetbox.London
- The Very Green Grocer
- London Veg Box

Competitor Analysis

Oddbox

Oddbox put their efforts into Instagram, where they have 141,000+ followers. Historical engagement (0.03%) and comments per post (3) signal below average organic reach. However, since January 2025, when they deleted all previous content, there has been marked improvement.

Oddbox champions 'odd/wonky' fruit and veg and content often centres on how much fruit and veg has been 'rescued'.

They also highlight farmers and offer up recipes. They average 9 posts a month, featuring one video + eight carousels.

Videos are usually low-fi (minimal editing, no crew), while others feature higher production values. Low-fi content is predominantly recipe/how-tos.

Abel & Cole

Abel & Cole's biggest social media presence is on Instagram, where they have 110K followers. They also have an active and engaged TikTok with 2400+ followers and 23.5K likes.

Historical engagement (0.57%) is strong, averaging 263 likes per post and 383 comments. Comments boosted by strong 'follow + tag' giveaway campaigns, often in partnership with a business in the wellness/cooking space (Mr Organic / Biona Organic)

Content is a celebration of food and healthy eating, featuring recipe ideas, in-season (and potentially unknown fruit and veg), and knowledge sharing.

Videos are scripted and well-produced and edited.

Abel & Cole averages 13 social posts a month, with a growing porportion (75%+) being video content.

Ripe.London

Ripe.London offer fresh fruit and veg boxes. They have 690 followers, and average 15 likes per post with an engagement rate of 2.17%.

Content is largely image-based with a recent push to include more video.

In many respects, it is quite basic, featuring images of fruit and fruit boxes, as well as 'shout outs' to Ripe.London staff.

All content is original and taken from the 'shop floor'.

02. Measuring Impact & Driving Peformance

Measuring Impact & Driving Performance

Competitors

Measuring the exact impact of social media on traffic/customer acquisition isn't an exact science, with industry tools often over/under-reporting.

However, there are signals that can help us understand the impact of competitor's social media efforts.

There are also a series of metrics we can track in-house, that will help us understand the impact of the social media strategy we intend to deploy.

Competitors

- ↘ Traffic ref. from social
- ↘ Branded Search

Fruit 4 London

- ↘ Traffic ref. from social
- ↘ Events attributed to social traffic
- ↘ Branded Search

Measuring Impact

Oddbox

According to SimilarWeb, in January 2026 traffic referred from social media accounted for 6.4% of all traffic. This results in 5,100+ website visits out of a total of 85,000 visits. It should be noted, this number includes paid social and doesn't account for anyone discovering Oddbox through social media and later searching for them.

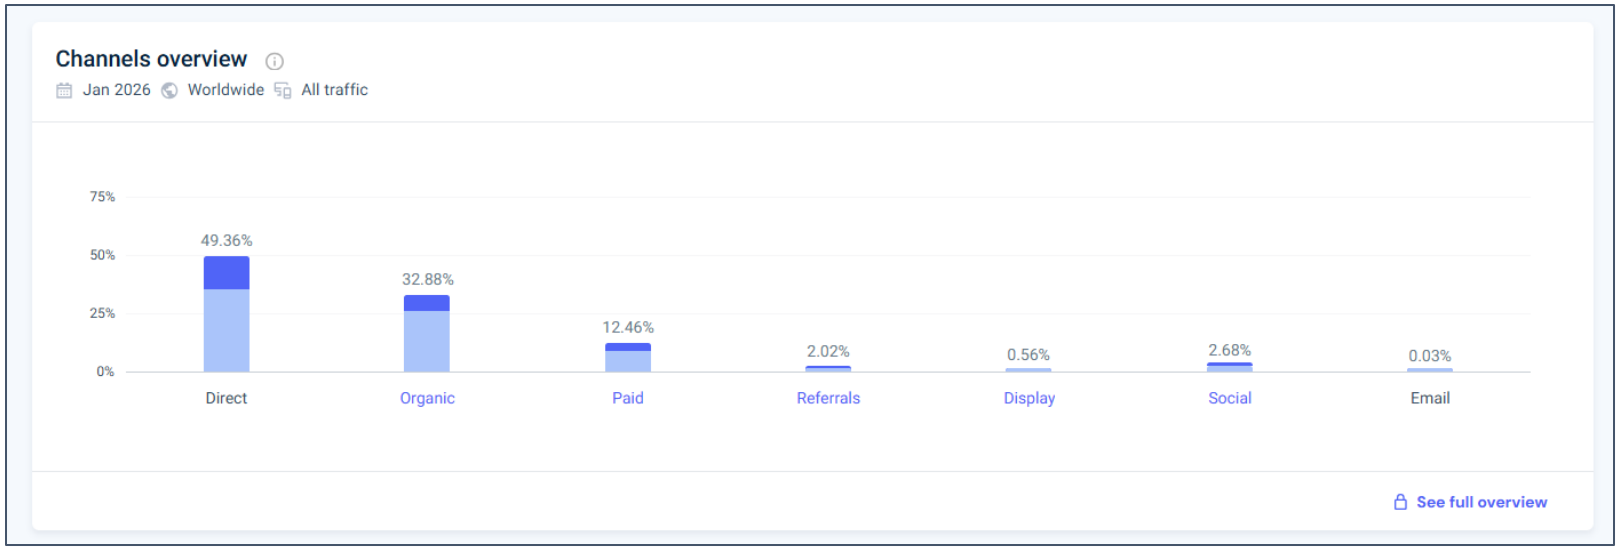
Oddbox invests in paid social, with 28 campaigns live as of February 2026. With that being the case, we can't accurately attribute the impact of organic social content on website performance/conversions.

Measuring Impact

Abel & Cole

SimilarWeb attributes 2.68% of Abel & Cole's traffic to social media. However, the same issues are present when accurately attributing the impact of social media on the businesses' goals.

Notably, both sites attribute around 50% of their traffic via Direct which points to strong brand awareness.



Driving Performance

Fruit 4 London

As Fruit 4 London establishes itself on social media, we need to understand the KPIs that define the success of our efforts:

Conversions: These are our primary metrics. Accurate tracking and positive momentum will give us an understanding of the success of our initatives.

Branded Search: This metric gives us an broad understanding of the awareness of Montgomery.

Engagement: This gives us an understanding of how our content is performing.

Driving Performance

Fruit 4 London

Priority	1	2	3
Success	Conversions	Branded Search	Social Metrics
Indicators	Online Orders / Newsletter Sign Up / Calls / Emails / WhatsApps	How many people are searching for 'Montgomery Wholesale'?	Followers / Reach / Likes / Comments
Source	GA4	Google Search Console	TikTok / Instagram / LinkedIn / Facebook

A monthly report that tracks these metrics, will give us an accurate assessment of the efforts across all channels, allowing us to optimise month-to-month.

Social Media Strategy

Fruit 4 London

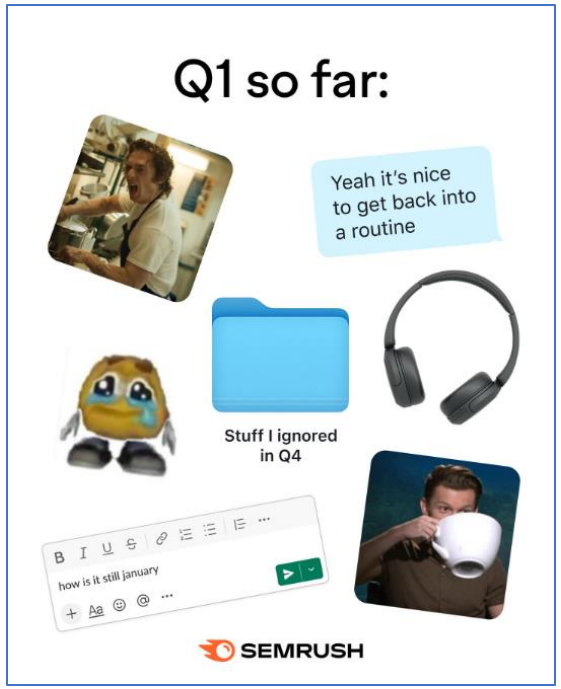
Office Fruit Box

As a key business objective, we want to increase the number of regular office fruit box customers.

By targeting these customers in our social media efforts, we can offer something fresh and original in this space: a blend of 'office culture' and championing great fruit.

'Office culture' content is popular and frequently deployed by a wide-range of industries from hospitality to SaaS.

One company that does it particulary well is SEMRush.



Fruit 4 London

Office Culture

Content is a mix of statics and video, and takes a light-hearted look at life in the office/workplace. It frequently deploys memes and viral trends.
